And this sums up his reply to all is critics. In every case, he showed that experts had counseled and con-curred before any of the expeditions dertaken, and it was clear, before he had gone far, that the house of commons sympathized with him.

For months Mr. Churchill has lived under reproaches. His entrance to the house yesterday was passed almost unnoticed. As he rose, his supporters gave him encouraging cheers. Approbation increased in volume as he answered one charge after another, and he concluded amid a hurricane of applause, while members of all political parties crossed the house to congratulate him.

Mr. Churchill said that he wanted to resume purely naval operations, but Lord Fisher opposed this. They could not agree, and, added the former first lord, "the month which passed between the cessation of the naval operations and the opening of the military operations was one of the least pleasant I ever spent in

In the opinion of the house, Mr. Churchill fully justified every step he took while head of the admiralty. As to the dispatch of Rear Admiral Craddock's squadron, he said he was in full agreement with the experts and advisers of that time—Admiral Prince Louis of Battenberg and Vice Admiral Sir Frederick Sturdee—and that the dispositions were the best that could be made in the circumstances.

Great Britain's command of the seas and the rapid and enormous destruction of German manhood were factors upon which the country might confidently rely. Germany's power was by Vice Admiral Carden, who was in all the territory they have absorbed to He was of the allies.

Story of the Dardanelles.

Discussing in detail the Dardanelles expedition, Mr. Churchill said he was not going to try to prove that the plan adopted was the best that could have been adopted. Least of all was he going to try to prove that his responsibility in the matter was not a great one. "I am concerned to make clear to the house and the nation," he said, "that it was framed entirely by experts and technical minds, and that in no circumstances could it be regarded as having been undertaken with carelessness or levity."

Remarking that the political situation in southeast Europe last December was stagnant and torpid and that the current of opinion favorable to the allies flowed sluggishly or even ebbed, Mr. Churchill proceeded:

They now are inclined to blame the government for not making these revelations before, and seem to find difficulty in making amends to Mr. Churchill.

Early Advice Ignored.

Both with regard to Antwerp ard the Dardanelles, Mr. Churchill, for the purpose of defending himself against reproaches, went a little farther than merely producing evidence that he had followed expert advice. "But," he added, "no action was taken."

As to the Dardanelles, before a naval attack was undertaken, he offered to provide transports for 40,000 troops from Egypt, on the chance of their being wanted, but was informed that no troops were available, and that, if they were, they should not be used in Gallipoli. The naval attack was indorsed by Vice Admiral Carden, who was in command at the time of Lord Fisher's resignation he himself had offered to retire, but the time of Lord Fisher's resignation he himself had offered to retire, but the time then reviewed the present military situation, and continued:

"We are passing through a bad time, and it will probably be worse before it is better, but that it will be better, if we only endure and persevere, I have no doubt whatever."

OMETIMES when I play my Pianola, it is the tender strains of some old, fond air. Then, perhaps, some other spirit moves me. I wish to play the music of some dance—languorous, yet filled with life - a piece say like the 'Scarf Dance' by Mme. Chaminade.

"Ah! how I revel in the exquisite music-I who could never play a note on the piano - when I play it on my Pianola. How easy it is for me to give myself up to its peculiar beauties - and to produce wonderful pianoforte effects, too.

"There on the roll in front of me I see a straight blue line whose position indicates for me the volume of tone. There on the same roll I see the wavy red Metrostyle line, and I know that I only have to follow it with the Metrostyle pointer to play in the most perfect time-to slow the music, perhaps, to an exquisite lingering quality, to quicken it, maybe, with sudden bursts of speed till the very spirit of the dance seems joyously to be a part of me, and I can almost see the dancer whirling around and snapping her scarf at the finish!

"I am playing music so spirited, that even though I cannot play an ordinary pianoforte, I am performing with all the feeling, the music impulse of a skilled musician. I can regulate the volume of the tone by a touch upon a simple lever. A wonderful patented device automatically sustains it for me with an effect which real planists give years of pedal study to attain; a simple cutting in the roll brings out the melody for me, and subordinates the bass accompaniment which comes with so thumping an emphasis in other player pianos.

"I have, in fact, with a little pleasurable application, developed the power to produce really musicianly pianoforte effects through the remarkable inventions which have made the Pianola so wonderful that it has been lauded even by the great Paderewski himself."

Enables you to play the piano well

We want you to come to our store and hear the genuine Pianola. The Aeolian Company, who make this wonderful instrument, have developed it so that everyone can play it well. Herein it differs from the host of player pianos which attempt to imitate it.

We are the sole representatives in this city for the Pianola, and we handle no player pianos but the Pianola line - that wonderful group of instruments embracing the finest pianofortes in the world, at their respective prices, combined with the genuine Pianola action.
